COURSE DESCRIPTION

Diabetes is an emerging epidemic. No matter what area of health care you work in, you will encounter people affected by diabetes. New approaches to diabetes management are continuously appearing.

This comprehensive four-day course is for health professionals from a variety of disciplines who face diabetes in practice. The goal is to update your understanding of the complexities of diabetes care, and learn effective approaches to educate those affected by diabetes. It is an ideal course if you are entering the dynamic, specialty field of diabetes education. This course is not specifically designed as preparation for the CDE examination, however it will serve as an excellent review in your preparation to become a certified diabetes educator.

The course format includes didactic and interactive presentations from a variety of experts, group discussions, and case studies. Opportunity will be provided to learn diabetes management innovations from technology and pharmaceutical companies during the interactive Exhibitors' Luncheon. Time is built in for networking with colleagues.

This is an intensive course that is sure to stimulate and motivate you. You will come away with a solid foundation in high quality diabetes management and education.

Barbara King Hooper, RN, MScN, CDE founded Kinghooper Diabetes Education to educate health professionals and laypeople alike about all aspects of diabetes care and management. She has offered the Diabetes Educator Course in co-operation with the University of British Columbia for the last 20 years.

Barbara is a registered nurse and a certified diabetes educator. She has served on the national executives of both the Diabetes Educator Section of the Canadian Diabetes Association, and the Canadian Diabetes Educator Certification Board. She has a proven track record of effective patient education, continuing education workshops, diabetes education program development and evaluation, and health-related research. Barbara's extensive experience and expertise as a nurse and health educator in inpatient, outpatient, pediatric, long-term care, and native community settings allow her to provide a comprehensive, innovative course for health professionals wanting to learn about diabetes education. Her clients include Health Canada, tribal councils, and pharmaceutical companies.
